EDITORS CORNER

Well another month has come around and I still haven't got the sack, Damn! I was working hard on it too.

Articles are dwindling in, but they are coming from the same stalwarts that having been supplying me with material since I started as Editor and realize that I need stories and articles to do this job. I don't like harping on this, as I hate it as much as most of you hate to put pen to paper or fingers to key-board.

Think of this.

It takes me about three days of my time and between $30-$40 of my money to get this magazine out. Not to mention the time that Noel spends helping out.

That is about the average time that you guys spend a month diving. Now we don't mind donating this effort to the Club, but a little consideration about our needs is not too much to ask.

The photograph on the front cover is another shot depicting, being at the right place at the right exciting moment. Neil & Lyn Vincent obviously were. Neat eh! The clarity made not be crystal, but this shot by a member warrants a front cover position in my opinion.

I made application to the Manly Hydraulics Laboratory of the Department of Public Works & Services to allow us to photo-copy the appropriate months of their tide charts for the Wet Rag. They came back to me declining permission to do so on a free basis, stating that the Publisher has a pecuniary interest in the publication and hence we would have to pay for the right to use their charts. This is a bit of a shame as their tide charts are the best on offer for us, but our circulation numbers are insufficient to warrant such an expense. In the world of business though, I can understand their concerns and the possible precedent that such an allowance may set. I tried.

If you change your e-mail address, please don't forget to let me know.

If you are sick of drop outs and cheap e-mail addresses, then may I suggest that you talk to Chris Ciardi of Maxi Net services. This is an Australian ISP service and I have been with this company since I have been on the Net. I may pay a little more than the cheapies, but I have very few problems and when that odd problem does arise, I get cordial help over the telephone without hesitation.

This is not an ad by Maxi Net, it is just something that came to mind as recently a number of people have been complaining to me about all sorts of problems they are having whilst connected and connecting to the net and with their mail systems.

The address if you wish to look at it is <http://www.maxi.net.au/>

PRESIDENTS POSSIE

Well! Hello again. A month seems to go around before we all know it and so has the year.

As you know the end of the year is near and I would like to see a great showing of members and their respective families at the Xmas party to be held at the Greyhound Social Club on the 8th December.

Bookings for this event will be accepted by any committee member, which means, just call any one of us and list yourself and family as attending.

Please note that there will be presents for children under the age of 12 years, so it will be necessary for all those attending with such children to let the committee know the names, ages and sex of their respective children. Also please note that the presents will only be for the children of the immediate family of current financial members, but you are all welcome to bring along friends and extended family members to the actual Xmas party for a good time.

It is still a matter of great consternation that we are still without a volunteer for the position of photographic officer.

This position is not as daunting as you all seem to envisage, as both Grey and Noel are there to help with this, along with a yet to be formed sub-committee. You do not need to be photographically minded, in fact it is perhaps an asset not to be so. It is time for someone else in the Club to come forward and offer their services. The self satisfaction of achieving a great result from this position is a huge reward in itself. Don't let me down here. If I can be expected to be your President time and again, surely one of you can fill this slot. Come on now!

Joke of the Month

One day, a diver was enjoying the aquatic world 20 feet below sea level.
He noticed a guy at the same depth, but with no scuba gear whatsoever.
The diver went down another 20 feet, and the guy joined him a few minutes later.
The diver went down another 25 feet, and minutes later, the same guy joined him.
This confused the diver, so he took out a waterproof chalkboard set, and wrote, "How the heck are you able to stay under this deep without equipment?"
The guy took the board and chalk, he erased what the diver had written, and wrote; "I'M DROWNING, YOU BLITHERING' IDIOT...!"

History

South Pacific Divers Club was formed about 1958 and held its first meeting in the backyard garage of Denis Robinson at Beverly Hills.

Denis was its first president and held that position for a number of years until he left Sydney to take up residence in Western Australia.

During the first few years of the club there were many exploratory, exciting and sometimes dangerous dives that took place among its young members. These were the days that everything was new and exciting and in many situations we dived where no one had been before. We were some of the early divers to explore the many sink holes at Mt Gambier in South Australia including Piccaninnie Ponds, The Shaft and The Blue Lake and others.

Those days there were no permits to dive these areas, you just explored as many sink holes and caves as possible without restrictions, everything was free and easy.

We mapped many new dive sites at that time along the Southern New South Wales Coastline. Jumped into the Blow Hole at Kiama many Sunday mornings, creating excitement among spectators until the police came and threatened us with arrest if we continued. Rafted down the Shoalhaven river when it was in flood, that was exciting. Tested scuba diving equipment, taught new members how to dive, this was before instructor agencies were formed in Australia. Some of our members discovered Shiprock Dive site whilst others commenced deep diving to eventually set an unofficial deep diving record at The Peaks that lie some kilometres off Maroubra Beach.

When seas were rough we did a lot of dry caveing. We were involved in locating a cannon and anchor from the shipwreck of the Clipper Dunbar that lies south of Sydney Heads. Many of the early members were expert photographers, they made their own underwater camera housings and were leaders in submitting photos and articles for the early Australian Skindivers Magazine.

Denis Robinson and myself became movie stringers for a Sydney TV station making a number of short underwater films for "Sunday Afternoon News."

As time passed the early members slowly left the club, new people entered and it changed from the times of free and easy diving to more controlled types of activities.

Just before Denis Robinson left for Western Australia he asked me to organize a small film festival, we named it, "New South Wales Underwater Film Festival". This became the forerunner to The Australian Underwater Photographer of the Year that commenced in 1980 and has run through two decades to become one of the major events on the Australian diving calendar.

Today South Pacific Divers Club is a lot different from its early days. The club is independent from any dive shop or dive organization, it is run by a committee of five, elected once a year by its members. The club conducts local dives twice a month along with social activities and dives away weekends to locations such as Jervis Bay, Terrigal, Foster and Seal Rocks, Ulladulla, wrecks at Eden, seals at Montague Island, Nelson Bay, local night dives and day charter boats dives as well as overseas scuba diving trips.

Whilst the club promotes safe diving its members are free to dive the way they wish. However its newly certified members are buddied with more experienced club member. Morning shore dives are generally followed by a BBQ and get together. Boat outings, particularly wreck diving, are for the more experienced members. Age among club members range from under 20 to 60 years and over, so you can see there is an age group for just about everyone.

Experiences among members range from Open Water Divers through to Instructors.

Among its many members South Pacific Divers Club has a cross section of active divers, some enjoy shipwreck diving, others underwater photographers, new divers would rather dive on shallow reef sponge gardens, others are interested in marine biology, and many prefer to dive from charter boats. If you want to meet other divers and enjoy the wonderful sport of scuba diving, mix socially with people of the same interest as yourself, go away on weekend outings or day diving trips, perhaps overseas diving, then join SOUTH PACIFIC DIVERS CLUB Inc.

NEW MEMBERS ARE WELCOME TO ATTEND OUR CLUB MEETINGS AND DIVE OUTINGS

South Pacific Divers Club is a social scuba diving club whose members have a common interest in scuba diving and in particular underwater photography. Club dives are on our web site. The club also organises weekends away at Jervis Bay and Nelsons Bay as well as other dive areas. We also organise once a year the Australasian Underwater Photographer of the Year Competition, open to all underwater photographers in Australia and Overseas. We also have a slide show after every meeting.

South Pacific Divers Club holds monthly meetings at the Bankstown Sports Club on the third Monday of every month. Meetings start at 8:00 and generally a slide show follows.

Next Meeting Points to Ponder

- 1) Storage area for records etc. A cursory check about shows that storage is available for about $70-$80 per month. Can we do better? This is still on the agenda
- 2) Would anyone like to do a dive-skills update/refresher?
- 3) Would anyone be interested in a camera operations workshop?
- 4) Do you need your first aid certificates updated?
- 5) Would anyone like lessons in writing, typing or computer skills, as this may help me receive some stories for the wetrag.

Letter to Boat Owners from the NSW Waterways

Dear Boat Owner

RE: Marine Safety Communications Post 30 June 2001

I am writing to all NSW boat owners of changes to the provision of marine safety communications initiated by the Commonwealth Government from July 2002 that have potential implications for the commercial and recreational boating community.

Currently, marine safety communications are provided to all vessels by the Commonwealth funded and Telstra operated Coastal Radio Network (CRN). In the case of NSW, this network provides a very high frequency (VHF) service between Port Stephens and Nowra and a high frequency (HF) service along the whole NSW coast and nearby waters. The Telstra operated Seaphone network (a commercial "user pays" service) is another VHF service providing coverage for all NSW coastal boaters using the service.

In addition, the volunteer marine rescue groups provide extensive 27MHz, VHF and HF coverage for popular boating areas off the NSW coast. The hours of coverage vary from 24hrs per day around Sydney, to less extensive, but significant services elsewhere.

The Commonwealth Government intends ceasing operations of the CRN on 30 June 2002 and transferring the responsibility for operating a replacement service to State Governments. This was proposed in order to reduce the direct cost to the Commonwealth of administering marine communications.

State Governments, including NSW, agreed to this proposal in principle, subject to a commitment by the Commonwealth to provide funding assistance to the States for establishment and ongoing operation of a permanent service that was capable of replacing the CRN and did not compromise the safety of boaters.

The Commonwealth has offered a "one-off" contribution of $3.025M for a national interim replacement service, however, it is not clear whether this will be sufficient to establish and maintain a competent interim marine safety communication service. A funding commitment from the Commonwealth to assist the States establish and operate a permanent replacement service is yet to be offered.

In addition to the closure of the CRN, I have recently been advised that the future of the Seaphone Network is also in question. It appears that Telstra considers the service no longer commercially viable and may discontinue it.

State Governments, including NSW, are working on systems to maintain the standards of marine communications beyond 2002, however Commonwealth Government funding is required to ensure this.

The NSW Government considers that the above changes to marine safety communication may, without suitable Commonwealth Government support, lead to an unacceptable down grading of the safety inshore, coastal and offshore vessel operation. In light of the proposed closure of the Seaphone service, the NSW Government is concerned that the Commonwealth's funding offer will be insufficient to establish and maintain an adequate permanent replacement for both services.

To address this matter the NSW Minister for Transport, Carl Scully MP, has written to the Federal Minister for Transport and Regional Services, John Anderson MP, requesting as a matter of priority, that the Commonwealth;

- A) approach Telstra to negotiate a delay in the closure of the Seaphone Network; and
- B) Contribute additional funding to maintain the existing levels of service until 2005 or an enhanced State-operated service is in place.

To date the Commonwealth has not responded to the Ministers request. It is with some reluctance therefore, that I write to inform you that if the Commonwealth Government does not agree to the above requests, it may be necessary to introduce a Marine Safety Communications levy on the State's boaters. The likely cost has yet to be determined, but should a levy become necessary, you will be advised as soon as possible, together with the details of the new service.

Always dive with a friend.

Always remove or cover your spearhead when not in the water.

Always use the safety catch on your spear-gun.

Always kill your fish immediately, and if possible remove it from the water.

Note:

If you have a problem receiving the newsletter because your ISP controls the size you are able to receive via this medium, then let me know. I am going to make different mail-out groups and I will need this information so as to know which group you should be in. Those of you with a hotmail or telstra easymail account seem to suffer this malady and will be e-mailed without pictures to cut down on byte size. Personally, I would change my account, as very little being sent about today is less than 250 kilobytes and this seems to be the cheap accounts maximum size limit.

Also, if when you open up the letter, you find spelling highlights, I suggest you adjust your spell checker to read in Australian English and even then, add most of the highlighted words to your dictionary. This newsletter is compiled in REAL English, not some American/Australian/English Pidgin.

I don't profess that my spelling is fool-proof, but it is better than most I read now days.

The Dog Watch which is broken into two, 2 hour watches has the bells repeat. In 1797 on the British Man-o-War, Nore, there was a mutiny at 6:30pm. It was decreed that the standard clock which was five bells would never be struck again, hence the short repetition.
