Overview of the journal

Publishing papers, reports, abstracts, reviews and news of the scientific study of caves and their contents, including the history of caves and technical aspects of cave study and exploration, Helictite covers the region of Australasia - Australia, New Zealand, the near Pacific islands, including Papua New Guinea, Indonesia and Borneo.

Since its establishment in 1962, Helictite has been instrumental in raising the profile of Speleological exploration, investigation and scientific research in Australia and surrounding countries. One of only four or five similar journals in the world, it has also greatly enhanced the reputation of Australasian Speleology in the international arena.

Authors may submit scientific papers, reports, abstracts, reviews and news. This may also include comprehensive descriptive accounts of the exploration and morphology of individual caves. Authors do not need to have a scientific background to contribute; quite a number of recreational cavers have written articles of lasting significance. All articles are refereed by two Speleologists with expertise in the particular area, and edited to meet usual scientific standards. The editors will advise and assist prospective authors as necessary.

Under an agreement with the previous publishers, ownership of Helictite was transferred to the Australian Speleological Federation Inc. in 2000. All back issues are still available and can be ordered individually or as a complete set. Single article reprints are also available.

Administration

Helictite is managed by the Helictite Commission of the Australian Speleological Federation Inc., who are the owners and publishers of the journal.

The Helictite Commission consists of six people who hold the positions of Chairman, Editors (3), Business Manager, ASF Treasurer and Back Issues Librarian.

ASF is a non-profit organisation incorporated in the Australian Capital Territory. It is also an Environmental Organisation registered by the Department of the Environment and Heritage in Canberra. It has been set up for the purposes of protecting and conserving the cave and karst environment of Australia, advancing and encouraging speleological science, its research, exploration and related activities, and representation at the national level as a federation of member clubs, societies, associations and organisation around Australia which have the same objectives as the ASF.

The A.B.N. (Australian Business Number) of ASF is 15 169 919 964. ASF is not registered to collect the Australian G.S.T. (Goods and Services Tax). ASF also has other publications, see the ASF web site for details.
