Pipeline to history

How the lava tubes formed

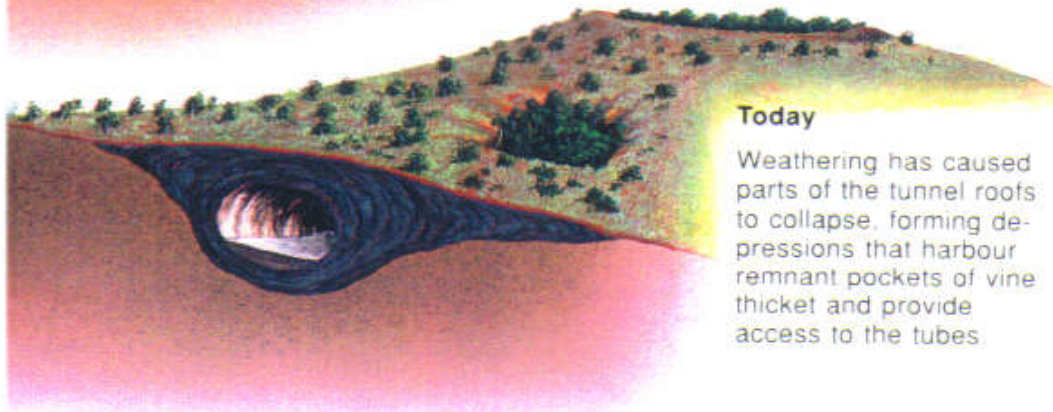

Undara erupts, spewing out lava at up to 1000 cubic metres a second. Part of the flow is channelled by watercourses for 160 km.

190,000 years ago

As the outside of the lava cools, it hardens to form an insulating tunnel around the still-molten interior lava. When the eruption stops, the last of the molten lava drains out to leave empty lava tubes.

Today

Weathering has caused parts of the tunnel roofs to collapse, forming depressions that harbour remnant pockets of vine thicket and provide access to the tubes.
